Brompton appoints Andrew Thompson as Head of Multi-Asset Sales

Brompton Asset Management has appointed Andrew Thompson, the former head of strategic distribution at Sarasin & Partners, as Head of Multi-Asset Sales. Andrew's remit will be to help build Brompton's multi-asset investment business.

John Duffield, Brompton's senior partner, said, 'Over the years, Andrew has proved successful in building long-term relationships with sophisticated financial advisers. I am, therefore, pleased he has joined us to help as we build our multi-asset business.'

Andrew said, "I am pleased to have the opportunity to work with my new Brompton colleagues, including colleagues with whom I have worked before, in building a leading multi-asset business. Regulatory and market changes have created an opportunity for financial advisers and asset managers to collaborate in devising investment services designed to meet investors' needs and aspirations. Brompton has a strong team culture and we seek to extend this collaborative approach to our relationships with advisers with the aim of building long-term partnerships that deliver tangible benefits to investors."
