Brompton appoints David Hedderwick as head of fund research

Brompton Asset Management has appointed David Hedderwick, formerly a senior director at Stanhope Capital, the private investment office, as head of fund research. David's skills and experience in the monitoring and analysis of funds across a broad range of asset classes will be deployed within Brompton's investment team headed by Gillian Lakin, chief investment officer.

John Duffield, Brompton's senior partner, said, "Fund selection is a key element within Brompton's multi-asset investment process. I am, therefore, pleased David has joined us as we continue to build our multi-asset business."

Gillian said, "I am delighted to welcome David to Brompton in the newly-created role of head of fund research. He brings the knowledge and skill to lead our fund selection process in addition to extensive experience of serving the needs of clients. I am very much looking forward to working with him."

Other positive developments within Brompton's multi-asset investment business in recent months include the appointment to manage two further WAY funds, the WAY MA Cautious and WAY MA Growth Portfolios, and the recruitment of Lewis Lawrence to the fund management team from Neptune Investment Managers.

Following Brompton's appointment as manager of WAY MA Cautious and WAY Growth, Sean Standen has taken on the role of lead manager for the two funds in addition to his existing multi-asset investment team responsibilities.
